Puberty is one of the most mobilizing times in life. It involves profound changes, strong new desires and strange new sensations. A world of changes. A world of new things: feelings, questions, fears, interests. A world of new desires: to explore and experience new things, to have more privacy and become independent.

The idea in this book is to help juniors understand what they are going through. In these pages, they will find information to answer a lot of their questions, clear up some of their doubts, and let them know what this new stuff is all about.

The hope is that it provides them with some tools to express how they feel and live their years of puberty to the full.

Gloria A. Calvo was born in Buenos Aires. Her permanent amazement at the diversity of the world, people and cultures, prompted her to study Anthropology.

Camila Lynn is professor in Educational Sciences at the University of Buenos Aires and works on health issues and public policies.

Agostina Mileo is a feminist activist. She writes and talks on the radio about science. Since 2017 she has been coordinator of the # MenstruAction campaign, which fights to make menstrual management products accessible to everyone.

Oscar is an only child, 16 years old, and studies drawing at the comic school. His mother passed away and his father is a prestigious doctor. Olga is an attractive drawing teacher and Mariela is Oscar's weird friend who believes in UFOs and aliens.

For quite a long time, Oscar and his dad have been very happy. But a sequence of unfortunate events complicates their lives, giving rise to this narration where suspense and intrigue rule from the first page onwards.

Since he was a child, Germán Cáceres wanted to be a writer and cartoonist. The world was wonderful to him thanks to the adventures that he read in books and magazines, he listened to on the radio or saw in the movies. He imagined that no matter how fanciful they were, they could really happen and when he grew up maybe he would be lucky enough to live one. He waited many years, but that magical adventure never happened. Then it happened that he would narrate action, mystery and science fiction stories, imagining that he was the hero. This way many novels came to light as Dreaming of Paradise, Traffickers of the Jungle, Rain of Skeletons, The Enigma of the Siambón, The Clueless Detective and The Mystery of the Absent Inspector.

As an illustrator of children's books with more than 30 books published, Cristian Bernardini has been published in USA, Spain, Australia, New Zealand, Puerto Rico, South Korea and the United Kingdom.

A book that brings together seven carefully selected adventure stories. From the hand of authors such as Horacio Quiroga, Germán Cáceres, Saki and Adriana Ballesteros, among others, dangerous open windows, an infinite forest, abandoned ships and an immeasurable sea parade through its pages.

A collection bound to become a favourite of genre's fans.

Olga Drennen is a teacher, poet, essayist, editor, translator and author of books for young readers. A juror for Alija, for her own works she has won a number of awards.

Horacio Daniel Gatto is an internationally recognized illustrator and graphic designer. His award-winning children's illustrations have appeared in many publications and several national exhibitions. Gatto is a member of the Argentinean Illustrators Association and the Argentinean Illustrators Forum.

Greta is a vamp who loves to shop, especially anything that is on sale. Phillip is a very calm vampire who is part of the "Allergy to Exertion" group, specialists in energy saving.

During a party at the Transylvania Tower, Greta and Phillip meet unexpectedly and the crush is immediate.

This novel is not only a satire of the Gothic genre, it is also loaded with humor and hilarious scenes.

Mónica López is a school teacher and the author of stories, novels, poetry and plays for young readers. A special mention in Sigmar Children's and Youth Literature Contest with her novel A concert, two vampires and a night of sighs, she was a finalist in the competition for the adaptation of a work by Adela Basch to a script.

Since his first illustrated book in 2012, Martín Morón's illustrations have appeared in stories, school manuals, magazines, album books, packaging, advertisements, animations and music albums.

This spooky story begins in Talcual, a town inhabited by 198 inhabitants, not one more, not one less. In this small town two families live: the Pomarolo and the Céspedes. Romina Pomarolo and Simón Céspedes are neighbors, friends from the only school in Talcual and, as everyone knows, they like each other. The news of the death of Chamigo Costa shakes the calm of the town, and their new life as ghosts begins!

A novel that will have kids dying of... laughter - what else?! - through a very funny parody of stories of ghosts and afterlife.

As Detective Intrigulis cracks a case, this series shows how science helps to solve crimes.

A highly original combination of information book and detective story.

The investigation of an art theft gives an explanation of the techniques and know-how involved in forensic science: what are fingerprints and how are they collected, how does the lie detector work, how can you tell if a painting is authentic, etc.

Also includes activities, anecdotes from the world of art and famous detectives from literature.

Who kidnapped Madame Glamour's spoiled pet poodle Mimi? Detective Intrigulis sets out to crack the case using the knowhow of forensic science: how to look for clues, how to analyze footprints, what a bloodstain tells us, what DNA is, and why it's used to identify someone. And it doesn't stop here! A delicious combination of comicstrip and workbook.

MY NAME IS EUGEN

TVZ, 199 p.

AGE: 9 +

ITALIAN AND LATVIAN RIGHTS SOLD. OTHER TRANSLATION RIGHTS AVAILABLE

My name is Eugene (1955) originally written for young readers but appreciated by adults as well, is considered one of the masterpieces of the twentieth-century Swiss literature.

Eugen and Wrigley are two inseparable friends. They have that difficult age (thirteen years old) where childhood is long gone but adulthood is still far away. Their energy and desire for adventure will get them into the adventure of their lives when their parents forbid them to participate to the boyscouts' trip and Wrigley is told he will be sent to collegium. The two boys run away, taking along with them a treasure map they have discovered in Eugen's old family mansion and undertake a tour of Switzerland to reach Zurich, where the man who drew the map lives. On their traces, angry paesants, worried parents, the police and a carousel of picturesque characters who will enliven their journey to the real discovery: that friendship is the only real treasure to persue.

The film My name is Eugen, adapted from this book, brilliantly displays the four boys adventures and their way of living life as a constant adventure losing none of the candor and freshness of the original book version by Klaus Schädelin.

Klaus Schädelin (1918-1987), studied theology at the University and became evangelical pastor first in a countryside town, then in Bern, where he attended the City Council for 16 years as an officer for Health and Social Care. He got married and had three children.

Original Swiss Title: Mein Name ist Eugen

My name is Eugen, the novel which has inspired many generations is now brought to stage! Author and composer Roman Riklin and director Dominik Flaschka stage this classic as a musical for adults where children have their share of pleasure, too. The story of the four Berne teenagers who resist growing up, provides fuel for a fast-paced, humorous stage production.

The Bucket Rider: A man is looking for coal to fill his bucket. He is a poor man and hopes that the coal-dealer will be generous enough to lend him some coal. He pleads for the coal and claims that he will pay for it later, but it soon becomes apparent that the coal-dealer and his wife are oblivious to his needs. The woman in particular ignores him, telling her husband that there is no one. So the poor man leaves them in anger for the region of the ice mountains where he disappears forever.

The Bridge: A bridge built over a ravine describes how it can connect both ends grasping onto each one. Helas, someone, or something, suddenly puts pressure on the structure and it collapses. The poor bridge's last words are to say it is breaking apart, falling upon the jagged rocks below.

Crossbreed: The story is about an animal that is half-kitten, half-lamb. The creature has characters of both animal breeds, yet also has distinctive attributes of its own as the peculiar eating habit of drinking milk while showing fangs.

A Little Fable: "Alas", said the mouse, "the whole world is growing smaller every day. At the beginning it was so big that I was afraid, I kept running and running, and I was glad when I saw walls far away to the right and the left, but these long walls have narrowed so quickly that I am in the last chamber already, and there in the corner stands the trap that I am running into." "You only need to change your direction," said the cat, and ate it up.

From the observations of the night sky to the universally accepted definition of a second, from the days of the Sumerian calendar to the creation of the Gregorian chant, from the Ancient Egyptians clepsidras until the ultra-accurate atomic clock... From the days when lengths were measured in cubits or feet to the establishment of the standard meter, the production of "ready-to-wear" clothing, and the invention of the GPS. This book clearly exposes the evolution of measurement systems and the way they have organized social and economic life throughout history in a way children will love.

que definirlo. Tenía que ser algo que todos tuvieran en común, que no dependiera del lugar ni del observador... [la Tierra] la decisión estaba tomada: se determinaría la distancia que había entre el Polo Norte y el Polo Sur, se dividiría esa distancia en veinte millones de partes iguales y cada una de esas partes sería un metro. Delambre y Méchain, dos científicos franceses, fueron los encargados de hacer las mediciones y las cuentas, un proceso que duró siete años. Y así fue que el 10 diciembre de 1799 se promulgó la ley que estableció el metro "para todos los pueblos y para todos los tiempos", una medida que hoy se usa en casi todo el mundo.

lamentablemente, los medidores de los franceses no fueron exactos (estrictamente, ninguna medición lo es) y el metro, tal como se lo definió, no es el resultado de dividir la distancia entre los polos en 20.000.000 partes iguales, sino, aproximadamente, en 20.004.000. De todos modos, ¡bravo, Delambre y Méchain! Cuarenta kilómetros de error en una distancia tan grande es casi nada. Cuando se dieron cuenta de la diferencia, era un poco tarde porque el "metro equivocado" ya estaba en uso, así que en lugar de corregir la medida del metro, se decidió hacer algo muy extravagante: cambiar la definición. De todos modos, este cambio no afecta en nada tu vida diaria, en la que basta con saber que un metro es lo que miden cien centímetros de cualquier regla que tengas a mano.

Además del metro, se estableció el grave como unidad de peso (que equivalía a 1 kilogramo), y así quedó conformado el Sistema Internacional de Unidades que, con algunas variaciones, es el que utilizamos actualmente.

i Incredible!

La PINTA es una unidad inglesa que mide un poco más de medio litro y no forma parte del sistema métrico decimal. En el Reino Unido hay una ley que establece que la cerveza y la sidra suelta deben venderse por pinta y es por eso que los vasos de los bares tienen la medida marcada. De hecho, la palabra "pinta" se origina en la marca pintada.

ERRAR ES HUMANO

En 1999, la NASA envió hacia Marte el primer satélite meteorológico interplanetario. Al aproximarse al destino, el satélite comenzó a desviarse de la ruta y, en lugar de ponerse en órbita, se acercó demasiado y se destruyó al entrar en contacto con la atmósfera del planeta rojo. La causa de semejante fracaso fue que los técnicos que ajustaban la trayectoria usaban el sistema métrico decimal y la nave estaba calibrada para realizar los cálculos en el sistema inglés de unidades que se usa en Estados Unidos. Two friends named Schmatz and Schmierle once lived on a meadow at the edge of the forest. Schmatz was a caterpillar and lived in a beautiful flower. Schmierle was a snail, and he carried his house around on his back. Every morning Schmatz impatiently shook Schmatz bedflower and called: "Get up, you sleepyhead! The sun is already in the sky. Have you at least thought about what we could do today?" And since Schmatz mostly knew an answer to this question, they had a lot of fun together. Until one day Schmatz rattled the flower in vain and Schmatz was gone...

A lovingly and poetically told illustrated story about togetherness and separation, about joy and sadness, which depicts death as a beginning, as the beginning of another life.

"I can recommend this book with its lovingly painted pictures and the appealing and comforting story for children in their final year of kindergarten and for elementary school students." Lesejury 18.11.2019

Cats, among children's favourite animals, are the heroes in this fairy tale, vaguely inspired by the Grimm Brothers' Cinderella. Long ago Kitterella lived happily with her mother and father in a far away kingdom. When her mother died, Cinderella's father remarried with a cold, cruel woman who had two daughters. When in turn he died, Cinderella's wicked stepmother turned her into a servant in her own house. Meanwhile, the King determined that his son the Prince should find a suitable bride and provide him with a suitable number of grandchildren. So the King invited every eligible maiden in the kingdom to a fancy dress ball, where his son would be able to choose his bride. Cinderella had no suitable party dress for a ball, but her friends the mice and the birds lent a hand in making her one, a dress that her evil stepsisters tore apart on the ball evening.

At this point, the Fairy Queen, the pumpkin carriage, the royal ball, the midnight stroke, the glass slipper get in the game and the rest, as they say, is fairy tale history.

THE UGLY DUCKLING

A new take on an old classic: In the original version, dating back to 1843, the duck was, after all, a swan. So what was he expected to become in the end?

This book challenges the comparison of animals of different species and their labeling as “cute” or “ugly”: In this story, the “ugly duckling” is a duck from beginning to end, and conquers everything with its tenacity, not its appearance. The swan might of course be beautiful, but the duck, why should it be less?

Almost a metaphor for modern times, where a seemingly strange child or young person should not feel uncomfortable with those who are beautiful or who pose as the “group” decides.

Help, there is a wrecker! Cockroach? Bug? A cockroach, that is a bad insect. All animals are frightened especially by his huge mustache ... Will they be able to get rid of him? Will it be a big elephant or a shy little sparrow who defeats him?

Who could imagine that an insect as bad as a cockroach would become the hero of a book? The animals knew no worries until a "scrounger" appeared among them. It was then that everyone "ran through the woods and through the fields, frightened by a pair of huge insect mustaches ..." But... would the shy elephants and crocodiles expect that a lively little sparrow comes and saves them? The happy return to normality of the animal family has been illustrated by Russian artist Anastasija Mosina. The story is the prose version of a poem by the Russian Kornej Čukovskij.

Drin drin. The phone rings and rings and rings! Drin drin. It never stops ringing. Incoming requests and more requests from his animal friends: the dove wants gloves, the crocodile asks for delicious shoes to eat! And the monkey, the bear, the stork, the pig... everyone is looking for the most absurd things. No hope for peace except, exhausted, going to the rescue of a hippo stuck in the mud.

A bright and rhythmic nonsense poem full of colors, written by one of the authors most loved by Russian children. The high visual energy perfectly interacts with the rebellious movement of the text.
